One of the greatest gifts America has given to the world is the music form we call Rock & Roll. Furthermore, the greatest aspect of Rock & Roll music is its poignant love songs. Mankind has always used music to express the emotions of life and love. Everyone loves a great emotional song that communicates the greatest principles of life, especially including love's fundamental principles. In some way, in some manner, and by somehow, everyone's soul has been moved to laughter and tears by great Rock & Roll songs. And this is why we also call Rock & Roll music "Soul Music." Do you have soul? In addition, the songs of each generation provide memory markers by which each generation instantly recalls the most important memories of their lives. Some of these memories are gloriously good, and some of these memories involve the bitter sweet elements of life. Such songs may even resurrect life traumas that cannot be erased from our memories. As an example, my father died when I was ten years old, and I still remember all the songs of the time. And it's good that I remember these songs, for by these songs I can instantly recall all the fond memories of his love and the wonderful dad he was, and I'm sure, still is. From my father's death I learned early in life to focus my mind upon the loving goodness of life and to avoid dwelling upon the bitterness of life. If the reader is a fan of Rock & Roll music, then please visit this feature of The Phileo Phoundation. How well do you know the History of Rock & Roll? How many of these Rock & Roll love songs do you know? Who's the artist, and what year was the song released? Now, with a spring in our walk, a smile on our faces, and a song in our hearts, let us now go forth and take a pleasant stroll down Memory Lane. There are eight parts to this feature.
